

PARK PASSION

THE DIFFERENCE YOU'RE MAKING IN YOUR NATIONAL PARKS • JULY 2021

FINALLY: SUMMER OF 2021

The parks are open and visitors are coming in record numbers to our big back yard, and with that comes the increased need for amplified education.

Let's all pay special tribute to the good peeps at Recreate Responsibly (recreateresponsibly.org). Thanks to the RR movement, progress remains focused: Build an inclusive outdoors. Know before you go. Practice physical distancing. Plan ahead. Play it safe. Explore locally. Leave no trace. Also, keep in mind the impact wildfires have had on our big backyard. Know and respect fire restrictions... keep campfires small and douse completely. No drones in wildfire zones. Give firefighters plenty of space.

And a tip of our own? Drop off a plate of cookies and jug of cold milk at your nearby fire station. We're all in this together.

WHO'S READY FOR SUMMER IN THE PARKS?

BY ALEX DAY

Here at Washington's National Park Fund (WNPF), summer is a special time. The weather is warm, our tents have seen a few outings, and we're all hitting the trails. Participants in our fundraising climbs are spending long weekends backpacking through the parks. In a lot of ways, it's the busiest time of the year for us—and for Mount Rainier, North Cascades and Olympic National Parks.

We're thrilled to watch so many critical park projects take off—projects that wouldn't have been possible without the support of our friends and fellow park-lovers. From citizen scientists monitoring marmots in Olympic to expanding and equipping the Search and Rescue efforts in North Cascades and restoring Paradise's subalpine meadows in Mount Rainier, your support is having a huge impact on our parks.

We're proud to have helped make these projects possible, and we know you will be, too. Learn more about all of the important work happening in the parks right now that WNPF funds at wnpf.org/projects.

FOUNDATION FOCUS:

ICICLE FUND SUSTAINS NORTH CASCADES NATIONAL PARK

WNPF would like to thank Icicle Fund for a $7,500 matching grant for General Operations: Sustaining North Cascades National Park. Icicle Fund values “meaningful impact in North Central Washington as you connect people to this beautiful region through engagement with its environment, the arts, and/or history,” which is just what our efforts will do. When matched with donations from our virtual auction (thanks to all of you!), we are able to fund additional important work. From citizen scientists studying butterflies to learning about bears and more, our projects share the wonders of North Cascades National Park with visitors.

Our flat hat salute goes out to the Seattle-based Good and Well Supply Company. Not only do they give back to Washington's National Park Fund, but their good smells ARE well done. Thanks, gang!

What's the Deal on Dark Skies?

“For me, it right-sizes me in the context of our universe. It makes me realize how big our universe is. I like to reflect [that] I might be observing lights and stars that no longer even exist. It just gives us a feel for the magnitude and extensiveness of the universe.”

Lisa Turecek, Chief of Facility Management at Olympic National Park, joined us for a Virtual Field Trip on the importance of Dark Skies and the park's efforts to become certified with the International Dark Sky Park certification program. She shared steps we can all take to reduce light pollution so that future generations will be able to enjoy the incredible night skies in our parks just like we do today. Missed out? You can watch the recording—and sign up for upcoming Virtual Field Trips—at wnpf.org/field-trips.

Washington's National Park Fund is proud to support dark skies in Olympic National Park—and you can help! Right now, we're raising funds for a seasonal park ranger for summer 2022 who will focus entirely on educating visitors and sharing a love for the skies above. Help us make this project a reality at wnpf.org/donate.

TRAILBLAZERS

MEET THE GONZALEZ FAMILY: ELIZABETH, ERIK AND EMILIO

BY KELLY SANDERBECK

You'd never imagine that a 15-year-old would willingly leave his friends, school and extended family to move nearly 1,000 miles away, to a remote corner of the Pacific NW... that he'd only visited once. But, Emilio Gonzalez is not typical; nor is his mom, Elizabeth, the Administrative Manager at WNPF. She manages accounting, human resources, our database of park projects affectionately known as 'Big Betty', and is liaison for the parks for grants and payments.

Two years ago, the family sat down to discuss a relocation from their home in California. Without flinching Emilio said: "So I would have to make new friends? That's OK. Let's go!"

Because Emilio was painfully bullied as a young child, the family ventured to national parks. After all, nature had healed him. "He could relax there and be a kid, with river walking, hiking or exploring. He wanted to go every weekend. Even though it wasn't close, we'd make the trip as it healed him. I'm still amazed at how powerful nature can be; it literally changed his life."

OUR 2020 ANNUAL REPORT IS HERE!

Read it online at wnpf.org/projects

"The first trip I ever took was a marvelous one, a climb of Mount Deception, which is the second-highest mountain in the Olympics, and I was hooked from that point on. I got to the top of the mountain, and all I saw were all these other mountains to climb."

*-Honorable Dan Evans,
former Governor and Senator,
founder of WNPF*

Have you ever wondered what it's like to summit a mountain in Olympic National Park?

Save the date for our Virtual Field Trip on August 11, when Nate Brown, adventure photographer and the man behind the Olympic Mountain Project (natebbrown.com/olympicmountainproject), will take us on a trip to the top of some incredible peaks.
